MANAGER'S COMMENT

June has been another difficult month: stocks ended the month down around -8% and credit markets were also negative with global yields steadily rising, while commodities were led by steep declines in Natural Gas. Recessionary fears have risen as consumers are squeezed by higher prices, exacerbated by the energy crisis in Europe. In this environment, hedge funds posted mixed returns as managers struggled to navigate the broad-based declines and volatility in rates and inflation markets: this was reflected in the significant dispersion of the underlying managers. The fund as a whole however posted a modest gain for the month. The biggest detractor was the G7 Fixed Income manager, which was mainly due to the higher implied volatilities and the lower pricing of future interest rates and inflation. The convertible arbitrage manager was another detractor, as it struggled to offset losses from bonds. The global discretionary manager was positive on the month contributing over +0.3%. The Multi-PM Equity Long/Short manager was also positive for the month.
